NCDPI Awards $1.8 Million to Economically Distressed Counties to Support Local K-8 Digital Literacy Efforts

The North Carolina Department of Public Instruction (NCDPI) is excited to announce a new partnership with Learning.com to improve digital literacy across the state!

Nurturing students' digital literacy skills encourages growth in areas such as computational thinking, digital citizenship and online safety, visual mapping, databases and computer fundamentals. Local Education Agencies (LEAs), Charter Schools, Lab Schools, and Innovative School District (ISD) schools within the most economically distressed counties (as determined by the North Carolina Department of Commerce Tier One designation) will now be eligible to receive funding totaling approximately $1.8 million for implementation and adoption support provided by the Digital Learning Initiative (DLI). All other North Carolina LEAs and schools may choose to leverage the cooperative purchasing agreement via convenience contract with statewide negotiated terms and pricing ($7.50 per student or $3,200 per site license).

All funding-eligible LEAs and Charter Schools within Tier One counties must complete an "intent-to-contract" form (sent directly to their Finance Officer in early April 2019) if they intend to execute a local contract with Learning.com for the 2019-20 school year by Spm on April 26, 2019.

Eligible LEAs and Charter Schools completing the "intent to contract" form will receive an allotment of at least $3.69 per allotted ADM in the Spring 2019 for adoption support (i.e., offsetting the cost of professional development, technical assistance, devices, etc.). Another allotment of at least $4.62 per allotted ADM will be provided in late Summer 2019 to those eligible LEAs and Charter Schools that have executed local contracts with Learning.com by July 1, 2019. This second Summer allotment will help to off-set the subscription fee. A summary of these allotments can be found below:
